Which type of specialist?

Acupuncturist

Acupuncturists are trained in acupuncture, a traditional Chinese therapy. Acupuncturists insert fine needles into specific points on the body to treat conditions or manage pain. Most states require acupuncturists to have a certification and a license.

Allergist / Immunologist

Allergists are medical doctors who specialize in diagnosing, treating, and managing allergies, asthma, and other immune disorders.

Oral and Maxillofacial Surgeon

Oral and maxillofacial surgeons are specialty dentists with advanced training in face, mouth, and jaw surgery.

Orthopedic Surgeon

Orthopedists or orthopedic surgeons specialize in treating bones, joints, and muscles. These surgeons may sub-specialize in a specific joint or area of the body, like the spine, knees, hips, or hands.
